The brain plays a major role in the regulation of the renin-angiotensin-aldosterone system (RAAS) and fluid and electrolyte balance. The role of the hypothalamic-pituitary-adrenal axis in mediating the effects of negative pressure in the body has long been recognised. More recent evidence indicates a pivotal role for the brain in the regulation of the RAAS and the sodium balance, involving central mechanisms of action including the corticotropin-releasing factor (CRF) and its receptors. In this review, the role of the CRF/urocortin (UCN) system in the central regulation of RAAS and sodium balance is discussed. The salient findings relating to the role of the central CRF system in mediating the antinatriuretic effect of negative pressure in the body are highlighted.
